KidsGive

KidsGive's Karito Kids is a diverse line of dolls that stand 21 inches tall and wear the latest styles. The sculptors were designed to represent African, Asian, Caucasian, Latin, and Mediterranean cultures. The dolls feature rooted hair and are fully articulated so they can sit, stand, and be posed. Each doll comes with a book written at a fifth grade level that tells of a mystery/adventure based on a mix of fact and fiction to learn about the doll's homeland.

Wiggity Bang Games

Wiggity Bang Games is expanding its product line with FlapDoodle, a board game designed for kids ages 6 and up encouraging kids and families to use their creativity to answer crazy questions and do stunts such as, "Make up a sentence that a very angry space alien would say," or "Invent two new ways to wave goodbye and demonstrate them."

Players move ahead when drawing a card and completing the task. They get help when landing on a happy and helpful Miss Goody Gumdrops space. But landing on a Mr. SourFace card will send players back with statements like, "Mr. SourFace says that if your name has letters in it, you must move back one space." The first person to make it through the FlapDoodle factory wins.

FlapDoodle will keep players moving, jumping, and dancing with interactive cards such as, "Stand up. Spin around. Slap both your legs three times. Say 'Blast off!' Then sit down" or "Jump up and wiggle around while singing, 'I've got ants in my pants and they wanna dance!' " or "Pretend you are a human pretzel. Twist yourself into a pretzel shape and then say, 'Give me some mustard!' "
